As Margaret Bolser, a girl fourteen years of age, was returning to Pottsville from herry picking yesterday, a man named Frank MeHugh at-Grove an assault of a similar character was made upon a girl ten years of age, the child being so roughly used that her life is despaired of. A pairful story comes from Palo Alio, a small mining village two miles from Pottsville. A Mrs. Falls confesses that when a child was born to her a short time ago, she took it into the woods, strangled and buried it. When the child was sought for it was seen that some animal had scratched the earth off the shallow grave and fearfully mutilated the bedy. The woman had left her busband, and had been acting as bousekeeper for a man at Palo Alto, and the child murder was perpetrated to save herself from shame. Neighbors who had noticed her condition were instrumental ie discovering the crime.

A QUEER CONTRACT. - A gang of men, headed by a woman, marched into Justice Haines' court, in Chicago, the other afternoon, amid a great deal of discussion and angry verbal disagreement. They arranged themselves along the rail, and then it was made known that the woman had hired one of the men for ten dollars to hold her husband while she committed suicide by jumping into the lake. She went at it, but before she got through made up her mind that suicide was wrong. She and her busband made up, and now they want the ton dollars returned. The man says that he had to work like a hero to hold the husband of the fell destroyer, and he decen't intend to return the money. Besides this, his labors extended over a time long enough to admit of the suicide of both man and wife, and he can't work for nothing. Justice Haines was out of town, and the meb pointed to Justice Mecch's dispensary of equity, where they began a suit which will be argued hereafter.
